
NUCLEAR MEDICINE TECHNOLOGIST RESUME

Summary:

A medical practitioner and expert who is completely involved with nuclear medicine practices, principles, diagnosis of patients and equipment operations; has worked closely in collaboration with the neurosurgeons in caring for his patients; provides comprehensive evaluation and treatment services for all patients; aims at promoting optimal wellness, shares a sense of duty and enthusiasm towards our goal to keep a professional atmosphere; has a strong dedication to research and training, provides post-graduate and continuous medical education for the future technologists and other health care professionals; is trained to react calmly and effectively in emergency situations and complies strictly to quality, safety, and infection control standards.

Professional Experience:

Chief Nuclear Medicine Technologist January 2007 – Present
ST Therese General Hospital, New York

Responsibilities:

- Coordinated with the medical scientists in the evaluation of nuclear programs and development of new techniques and procedures.
- Evaluated the performance of the medical staff to ensure all are complying with the hospital standards.
- Identified training and knowledge needs of the staff in performing their duties and obligations.
- Coordinated with researchers in research projects and established developments in policies.
- Monitored the daily schedules of staff and ensured all regulations and policies are followed accordingly.

Senior Nuclear Medicine Technologist May 2004 – December 2006
ST Therese General Hospital, New York

Responsibilities:

- Implemented programs to design education and training of nuclear medical staff.
- Organized documentation of quality control and assessed performance of every staff member.
- Monitored inventory of supplies and materials to ensure availability at all times.
- Conducted research and analysis of conditions of patients suffering from radioactive exposures.
- Coordinated with colleagues and other professionals on the activities and services in nuclear medical science in order to be updated with regards new technologies and information.

Nuclear Medicine Technologist March 1999 – May 2004
ST Therese General Hospital, New York

Responsibilities:

- Coordinated with the medical scientists in the evaluation of nuclear programs and development of new techniques and procedures.
- Evaluated the performance of the medical staff to ensure all are complying with the hospital standards.
- Identified training and knowledge needs of the staff in performing their duties and obligations.
- Coordinated with researchers in research projects and established developments in policies.
- Monitored the daily schedules of staff and ensured all regulations and policies are followed accordingly.

Senior Nuclear Medicine Technologist May 2004 – December 2006
ST Therese General Hospital, New York

Education:

Masters Degree in Nuclear Medicine
University of Arizona, 1999
Bachelor of Science in Nuclear Medicine
University of Arizona, 1996

Skills/Certifications:

- Strong leadership and teamwork attributes
- Excellent time management skills

- Proficient in computer skills
- Knowledge in nuclear physics
- Ability in assessing the safety regulation of the nuclear plant

Associations/Organizations:

American Registry of Radiologic Technologists, Secretary
American Society of Radiology, Member

Build your Resume Now